

There is a legend that fellow writers challenged Ernest Hemingway to write a 6 word story that could bring someone to tears.

This may or may not be the way that the six word story came to live.

Now it's your turn to write some of your own 6 word stories.

Some ideas to get you started and to help you focus:

1. Write a six word story about who you are.
2. Write a six word story about why you homeschool.
3. Write a six word story about why learning is important.

That's it, simple and to the point. Stay tuned for ideas about how to apply your six word story to lesson planning, curriculum development, and so much more.

Sample stories:

Artist/creativity educator no longer trapped.
Energetic teenage boy, glued to chair.